659 798 schools. Teachers who openly attended churches were summarily dismissed.

In spite of all these restrictions and threats, churches are well attended, especially in rural areas. Churchgoers are mostly women and people not connected with government offices and concerns, less dependent on the bureaucracy. Intellectuals and officials travel to distant places where they are not known personally to attend Mass or for confession. Rural churches, further from cities or where only small MGB-MVD garrisons are stationed, draw the largest attendance.

Religious processions on streets were not banned officially but few people dared to show themselves publicly and face the jeers of the armed blaspheming Russians and a few native traitors. The clergy discouraged public processions exposing the faithful to unnecessary persecution.

Marriages are registered by local Executive Committees. Those who so desire may go through a religious ceremony but a religious ceremony is not recognized by the authorities. Marriages contracted prior to the Russian invasion were not questioned, however.

Several small Protestant congregations are still in existence in the Klaipėda District, but most of the Protestant churches were shut down and converted to other use for lack of communicants. The Calvinist churches of Biržai and Prienai were turned into military horse stables. Protestants are more or less tolerated, because the Protestant Church offers no problem to the occupant.

The pre-war Russian settlers, natives of Lithuania, regularly attend the MVD-dominated Orthodox churches. The new settlers go to churches occasionally out of curiosity.

Since the end of 1947, persons exhibiting religious icons and crucifixes in their homes came under persecution. Religious pictures and statuettes found in homes by the armed searching parties infuriate the Russians and their stooges. Religious objects are smashed, bayoneted, spat upon and trampled by the puny "masters of the world" raging against their Creator.

Living quarters of the pastors—"cult servants"—were requisitioned by the housing authorities and a small nook was assigned to priests. Churches are assessed with exorbitant taxes. Complaints are answered: "If you can't meet state obligations—close up shop." The faithful exerted every effort to contribute the necessary funds and in most cases the tax levies were met. Thereupon the Russians demanded lists of contributors. The pastors answered that they did not list plate contributors—and were arrested and threatened with prosecution for "failure to account from public funds." A number of churches were unable to meet the levies, as all of the people are burdened with excessive taxes, requisitions and perennial "voluntarily assumed contributions to the state" imposed by the armed militiamen.

000 It is not known whether, since comrade Gailevičius claimed all churches as "cultural monuments" subject to his custody, churches would be taxed—that is, churches left "operating."

A church is the only place where a tortured people could find spiritual solace and escape from the blaring loudspeakers and mad ravings of the Russian oppressor.
